Jan 10 2013 55406Not Acceptable The resource identified by the request is only capable of generating response entities which have content characteristics not acceptable according to the accept headers sent in the request.406happens when the server cannot respond with the accept header specified in the request

Statuscode406 Not Acceptable in ASP Core Asked 8 years 7 months ago Modified 3 years 10 months ago Viewed 29k times Dec 6 2013 406is used when the client requests a response in an unsupported content type in your case anything other than JSON using the Accept header

415 on the other hand is used when the client POSTs or PUTs data in an unsupported content type. In a nutshell use406if can t output in the expected format and use 415 if you don t support the input format

See RFC 2616 for their definitions 406 Nov 12 2017 Both406and 200 are unsuitable for this situation 406is meant for content negotiation when the server cannot send a representation of a particular resource with the media type indicated in the Accept header of the request

200 must be used when the operation has succeeded what s not the case

You could probably go for the generic 400 to express a bad request or go for 403 to indicate that 118406Not Acceptable The resource identified by the request is only capable of generating response entities which have content characteristics not acceptable according to the accept headers sent in the request

So your request accept header is application json and your controller is not able to return that May 12 2019 Python Requests HTTP Response406Asked 6 years 7 months ago Modified 4 years 7 months ago Viewed 19k times Dec 18 2017 But I feel like Spring requires a third party serialization framework to render the result i.e
