Mar 29 2016 as you wish indicates that the other person has already made a choice and you accept it but you do not agree with it. it's up to you. Indicates that no decision has been made and you think that the other person should make the decision

Both are polite but as you wish definitely conveys disapproval Mar 17 2023 The normal phrase is if you so wish but you should regard this as an idiom because it has an archaic structure. The only other phrase I can think of that uses so before the verb with that meaning is It was/will be so agreed

In any other case to use so in the sense of what was stated before put it after the verb I think so. He did so. Having said that if you wish so is not idiomatic Apr 19 2020 Yes but despite what you may have read I wish I were rich is not a subjunctive clause

The subjunctive is a clause type that uses the plain form of the verb as in It is vital that I be kept informed. The were in your example is best called irrealis a special mood form instanced solely by were with 1st or 3rd person singular subjects

Many speakers prefer to use the preterite was Jun 25 2014 The entry for wish in OAAD gives an example Be careful what you wish for. You just might get it = and find that you really don't want it

I find it difficult to pin down the bold sentence As a side note if you wanted to wish somebody a merry Christmas it is more common to simply say Merry Christmas rather than I wish you [a] merry Christmas

By saying merry Christmas it is implied that you are hoping they have a merry Christmas Mar 18 2013 I wish you were mine because I love you

On the other hand want is more of a logical or physical desire or need that is implied to be something that may occur or is within one's control to occur 5 When someone wishes you good things like Happy holidays and blah blah Is a correct and polite way to answer a flat Thank you likewise Or It should be better to respond Thank you I wish you the same A teacher taught me the likewise one but really I never have heard it in real greetings

Thanks in advance 0 Is there any difference between these three sentences? If yes what is it? 1 I so wish to make my parents proud of me someday. 2 I so hope to make my parents proud of me someday

3 I so want to make my parents proud of me someday Note that you can use the simple past for this but it is actually more common to use the past perfect had stopped instead. Now the use of were in your last example is actually talking
