Most standard hives even insulated ones lose a huge amount of heat through poor design and box geometry

That heat loss forces bees to spend massive amounts of energy just to maintain brood temperature especially in cooler months or during early development May 4 2025 The queenbee is the most crucial element in producing strong and healthy bees

In saying that while considering trading healthy queen cells from a beekeeper friend that way will not keep producing the same gene that will become weak is that truth? Dec 27 2024 Great presentation from Mr. Steve Riley from this year's National Honey Show just dropped. He and Dr

Stephen Martin host and maintain varroa-resistant and work closely with the growing cohort of TF beekeepers in the UK. A few slides outline the fundamental dynamics at work in the colonies Mar 11 2019 Hey all we used Michael Palmers sub this last year

We add some lemongrass to encourage quicker uptake on the sub. It worked great either way. My wife made a video of how to make the sub for a local club. It is 1.5 minutes long and has the Palmer recipe broke down to 5.25lbs of patty

Two pollen trap designs are described Feb 5 2023 Heading into my 4th year of beekeeping and thinking about trying to make and sell beeswax candles this year. Right now I just make beeswax chapsticks and sell any extra wax I have by the pound

For those that make beeswax candles is it really that much more profitable than just selling clean Francis LW Ratnieks and Oliver D Visick Laboratory of Apiculture Social Insects LASI School of Life Sciences University of Sussex If you obtain your information about the honeybee from mainstream media you may get confused
