A conflicted copy occurs when a file has been changed from multiple locations. Something has to have the file open in multiple locations for the conflict to occur. A file doesn't necessarily need to change for a conflict to occur.

Simply opening it can cause it especially in Microsoft products which modify a file simply by opening it even if you don't save it.

The only way to know which one? How can I get conflicted copies of a shared file when only 1 person is accessing? My son and I use a shared Dropbox folder to share some Excel files. In the past we sometimes had conflicted copies because we both accessed the same file at the same time.

But the last week we are 100% sure we didn't read or write these files at the same time. The conflicted copy is saved in the same directory as the original file and the file name is appended with the name of the computer that made the change and the date the conflict occurred. How can I stop conflicted copies? We currently use Office documents and when 2 users use the same file the first user who saves the document saves the original file and the second person who saves saves a conflicting copy. You should only get conflicted PST files if you have opened Outlook on both machines at the same time or at least opened the second one before the DB app was able to sync the changes from the first one being closed.

This is a regular cause of conflicted copies on any application.

Outlook is nothing special. Conflicted copy on a folder? OK I understand the principle of what creates a conflicted copy with a file which has been updated while another user or the same user's account on another machine has also updated it remotely.

But what gets a folder marked as a conflicted copy? tsu105 Dropbox Turned on my laptop this morning and noticed my entire dropbox folder said conflicted copy and renamed it.

I have seen individual files with this issue but the entire folder became conflicted? And if I save the changes it will not change the document already present but it creates duplicate with name 2024_01_OBDY_OBJEDNVKA_ZAPISUJTE SEM Back Office denn s conflicted copy 2024 11 21 .xlsx I already checked permissions.

And tried unsynchronized and again synchronize data Office 365 Co authoring on MacOS and Windows. How to avoid conflicted files? Hello We are a team of 7 people using a Dropbox account for our business with centralised admin.

We have four people using Microsoft Office on a Mac and 2 people the joint CEOs using Microsoft Office on a Windows Laptop.
