No special effects makeup was used except in one brief scene at the end of the movie Abstract This article introduces Tod Browning's 1932 film Freaks in conversation with nineteenth century carnival and fair practices and further explains the creation and development of the freakshow. In a circus in which several people with significant physical deformities make their living as sideshow attractions a voluptuous trapeze artist and her brawny lover attempt to take advantage of a midget in order to take possession of his fortune. The truth strength of Code of the Freaks is its ability to translate years of academic theory and activist discussion into a compelling and easy to follow documentary.
