It is named after Berenice a Jewish Queen in the first century who almost became a Roman empress

Archaeologically the site bears remarkable church remains from the Byzantine and Crusader periods commemorating a sacred stone anchor. It is on Mount Berenice however that the most impressive ruins can be seen. Remains of a 3.2 meters thick wall and the remnants of its towers some of which have been preserved to a height of around five meters can still be seen at the site.

On the southern slope of the hill stand the ruins of the western gate of Byzantine Tiberias. See what Berenice MT looked like in the past
