Exact volume of the cone = $\frac{1}{3}\pi r^2 h$  Approximate value  $\approx 11.78$  inches  $\approx 3$  to 2 decimal places Area of a circle is  $\pi r^2$  This forms the base of the cone. For a tube the volume would be  $\pi r^2 h$  Where  $h$  is height and  $r$  is the radius

A cone is  $\frac{1}{3}$  the volume of a tube so we have Volume of a cone = $\frac{1}{3}\pi r^2 h$  Equation 1 We are given that the diameter is 3 inches

As the radius Dec 3 2017 Goldstein's Experiment Discovery of vacuum pumps led many to experiment with gas discharge tubes vacuum tubes filled with very small quantities of inert gases subjected to high electric voltages

This led first to the discovery of cathode rays 1870s and later to the discovery of anode rays 1886

A ray seemed to emerge from the cathode negative electrode that travelled in a straight line. An electron of energy 10.8 eV is incident on an H atom. Then? Can I solve this problem by using conservation of energy? Please solve this electromagnetic induction question? A particle of mass  $m$  moving with speed  $v$  hits elastically another stationary particle of mass  $2m$  inside a smooth horizontal circular tube of radius  $r$ . Nov 23 2024 I wasn't able to delete the 8 unused teams so I drafted them the lowest ranked players

Also for our benches there was 4 extra rounds I drafted the lowest rank players so hopefully they won't get subbed in during the sim. His pick 6 to Eddie Jackson against the Bears put the Bears up 21 to 6 with 8 and a half minutes to go in the game

His fumble 6 against the Seahawks put them up 21-0 with 2:35 left. Yes he's not to blame for any of the losses. Very clutch against good teams. None of what you just said negates what the tube stated. Dumbass. Love you tube but I think phenomenal is disgustingly excessive

They had one pick I like Alexander. The best part of their draft was picking up a 1st next year which was impressive. The rest are raw or average picks. Jackson was a good pick

First rd talent. The extra first rounder was the move of the draft though Jun 6 2016. The correct term is urethritis. > The urethra from Greek ourethra the passage for urine is the tube that carries urine from the bladder to outside the body. The suffix itis means inflammation of

Thus inflammation of the urethra is urethritis

Urethritis is often caused by bacterial infection May 1 2025 Re Shadur Sanders Draft Fall by jffl_commiss Tue Apr 29 2025 8:44 am Sergeant Rubetube wrote Mon Apr 28 2025 8:42 pm One NFL exec said his defensive players were begging to
