Jun 27 2016 I came across a few combinations of nailedit or naileddown in various contexts. According to the blog posts it seems to be widespread on the internet. However I have never heard these expressions in the real life

Is nailedit a common expression? What does it mean? I appreciate every answer!

Nov 20 2014 Naileddown is a phrase similar tonailedit. From this site NailedIt is a phrase used to express success after achieving something seemingly difficultwithrelative ease

Online it is often found as a caption on image macros or in sarcastic commentary criticizing the quality of success especially in response to attempts at recreating recipes or craft projects. The site also lists the Oct 30 2015 Younailedit

You wouldn't say in a chair for a straight back chairwithno arm rests. You say on the chair in such a case

Just another weird quirk in English It is common practice to use one's mouth as an additional hand to hold small nontoxic objects Literally mouthful of nails might mean source futurederm but since your text has given the context of He stayed at home andnailedup the mail slot

It must be the first image Jul 6 2015 Can someone be so screwed because someoneailedan argument that made him hammered? Someone commented that my sentence is wrong because I used the word hammered incorrectly. He stated that it means drunk

However according to my research about hammered it can also mean to attack or criticize forcefully and relentlessly May 12 2018 Something like Nailedit! And sanded it and plumbed it and electrified it and painted it would make a great housewarming invitation for your finally finished home I was wondering if it sounded natural to native speakers to say nail the sh*t out of something essentially mixing the two expressions to sound more emphatic as in Shenailedthe shit out of the chorus henailedthe shit out of writing that piece of code Sep 2 2024 Why would you do this to me? Why would a word for red come into being before a word for blue? What is 'quot would's 'quot role in this sentence? Is this some kind of broken conditional? I've also Knock it out of the park is the only idiomatic phrase

Court and ring are not associatedwithbaseball and thus cannot be used a baseball diamond refers only to the parallelogram formed by the baseline from home plate to 1st 2nd 3rd and back to home which essentially only covers the infield area of the whole baseball field so knocking it out of the infield isn't really viewed as a Jan 28 2025 I think you'venailedit
