The stud format and Flop game with blinds format are different enough that equivalences are difficult. We can't base the tournament structure on the price the first raise gets on their bet

Your first question should the limits be different for NL and limit uh yeah for sure Wizard of Odds says that Mississippi Stud has a house edge of 4.91 with 3.59 units per hand. The element of risk is $4.91 \cdot 3.59 = 1.37\%$ total house edge

W Simple question are there any equivalents of the complete guide to beating the micros for other games? I'm particularly interested in PLO stud high and 2/7 single draw. Books are also good I'm reading Jeff Hwang's books and Tri Nguyen's NLHE to PLO books but I prefer free resources naturally

In Stud, you can make a straight flush even if you start with 3 unsuited cards but it's a lot less likely than if you start with 9TJs and also how hands are played

If no one ever folded it would happen considerably more often than otherwise. It was no limit Hold'em with the same hand but different suit. May 9 2024 I went nearly 10 years about eight going to dinners playing cash at the WSOP and knowing him as Steve from the StudPoker forum

And th Sep 3 2025 Lol 100% and it's pretty much always the women unless the guy is some superstud. Why any guy would agree to that is beyond me unless it's a completely non-serious relationship but then they wouldn't be getting married
