Oct 30 2015 52 I've been using gulp watch. The current version of gulp watch relies on the call gulp.parallel. This call is only available from gulp4. However gulp4 is not available via the npm repo. npm info gulp dist tags returns { latest 3.9.0 }

I can see that there is a 4.0 branch within the git repo npm install gulp npm install gulp g npm install gulp util npm install gulp util g When try to run gulp get gulp is not recognized as an internal or external command operable program or batch file

Running npm list gulp or g lgulp 3.7.0 with the location of either my global or local gulp installation. I've tried running node gulpfile.js pointed to my gulpfile and it runs without Feb 12 2016 grunt and gulp are task runners to automate everything that can be automated i.e

compile CSS Sass optimize images make a bundle and minify transpile it. grunt vs. gulp is like maven vs. gradle or configuration vs. code

Grunt is based on configuring separate independent tasks each task opens handles closes file Nov 6 2015 I see people using gulp with webpack. But then I read webpack can replace gulp? I'm completely confused here can someone explain?
UPDATE in the end I started with gulp

I was new to modern fr Sep 15 2016 Grunt focuses on configuration while Gulp focuses on code Grunt was built around a set of built in and commonly used tasks while Gulp came around with the idea of enforcing nothing but how community developed micro tasks should connect to each other. However this type of questions is broad and opinion based Dec 15 2015 $ gulp build but don't have much understanding of all these front end frameworks please help me get an overall understanding of Grunt Gulp.js and Bower Apr 22 2016 I'm a backend developer and slightly confused by npm bower gulp grunt and Yeoman

Whenever I ask someone what their purpose is the answer tends to boil down to dependency manager for all of them Nov 12 2025 Stack Overflow The World's Largest Online Community for Developers Apr 30 2019 Origin of the problem This issue stems from the fact that gulp 3.9.1 depends on graceful-fs ^3.0.0 which monkey patches Node.js fs module

This used to work with Node.js until version 11.15 which like all odd numbered versions of Node.js is a version from a development branch that shouldn't be used in production and hasn't been updated in years Jun 16 2014 I currently have two tasks that both compile sass files

I would still like to concat the two directories into separate files but it seems that it would be more maintainable if I could simply crea.
